Abstract

This study analyses the comparative performance of Regional Rural Banks in North East India during the post period of 2014-15 to 2015-16 whereas the same analysis was worked out at the state level for the same period. The study is based on secondary data collected from various annual reports of RRBs in NE India. The study concludes that RRBs in NE India should provide more loans and advances to needy people for better performance. To attract more depositors in their state, banks should make awareness campaigns to the rural people, as many of the rural people are uneducated.
